

The DMRF Canada Support Group Network

The DMRF Canada offers a national network of local dystonia support groups and contacts. These local groups serve as a lifeline to affected individuals and families, providing information, support and friendship in communities across the country.

Our local support groups empower dystonia patients by providing information, support, and education. They provide life changing opportunities to help individuals thrive by helping to build personal networks in the dystonia community, provide opportunities to learn adaptive strategies, and work together to raise awareness and educate our communities about dystonia.

Support groups may also work together to provide local opportunities to promote awareness and fundraising for dystonia research. Based on your location, the following information may be of interest to you:
